This will not change the allocation of prototypical funding to districts. However, there will be additional IT costs required to existing SAFS systems for programming and testing the change. OSPI estimates approximately 100 hours at a rate of $120 per hour as well as one week of OSPI program staff testing at approximately $3,200 for a total IT cost of $18,000.

Costs are indeterminate because at this time OSPI does not have enough data to determine if districts will need to hire additional staff locally in order to maintain PSES compliance due to this change. If the removal of this staffing category from compliance requires districts to hire additional staff to maintain compliance, there will be a local cost. On average, actual district salaries for PSES positions exceeds the state allocation by approximately $24,000 per full-time equivalent staff. Districts options to cover this cost include, but are not limited to, local levy funds or under hiring other prototypical school positions to free up funds for this purpose.
