Part II: Narrative Explanation

II. A - Brief Description Of What The Measure Does That Has Fiscal Impact

Significant provisions of the bill and any related workload or policy assumptions that have revenue or expenditure impact on the responding agency by section number.

In November 2022, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) issued an order ending the practice of leasing state aquatic lands to commercial finfish farmers. This will result in the layoff of 34 employees at two Cooke Aquaculture facilities - the last facilities still involved in commercial finfish farming on state aquatic lands. This bill will explicitly include those 34 employees as "dislocated workers" for unemployment insurance benefits, making it easier for those workers to qualify for training benefits.

The Employment Security Department (ESD) Employment System, Policy and Integration Division (ESPI), and the Unemployment Employment Customer Services Division (UICS) have both reviewed this bill and determined it will not significantly increase or decrease the division's workload. ESD does not see any additional costs associated with this proposed legislative change and assumes any work regarding responding to possible unemployment claims due to the layoff of 34 commercial finfish farmers will be negligible and costs are not included in this request.

II. B - Cash receipts Impact

Cash receipts impact of the legislation on the responding agency with the cash receipts provisions identified by section number and when appropriate, the detail of the revenue sources. Description of the factual basis of the assumptions and the method by which the cash receipts impact is derived. Explanation of how workload assumptions translate into estimates. Distinguished between one time and ongoing functions.

Description of the factual basis of the assumptions and the method by which the expenditure impact is derived. Explanation of how workload assumptions translate into cost estimates.
