Part II: Narrative Explanation

II. A - Brief Description Of What The Measure Does That Has Fiscal Impact

Significant provisions of the bill and any related workload or policy assumptions that have revenue or expenditure impact on the responding agency by section number.

This bill seeks to terminate an existing B&O tax preference for newspaper printers and publishers and replace it with a new tax preference that would provide taxpayers with a B&O tax exemption for printing or publishing a newspaper and publishing eligible digital content and extend the expiration date.

The current tax preference, which reduces the B&O tax rate for newspaper printers and publishers from 0.484% to 0.35%, will expire on July 1, 2024.

Section 1 is the findings statement. It summarizes the financial losses and employment declines realized by the newspaper industry and the disruption of its traditional revenue streams as the internet became the dominant medium for news content. It also summarizes the oversight function and educational role that local journalism often serves in governance and associated trends in civic engagement.

Section 2 would add a new chapter to RCW 82.04 and establish eligible activities:

- Printing a newspaper, publishing a newspaper, or both; or
- Publishing eligible digital content, by a taxpayer who reported under the printing and publishing tax classification for a printed version of the publication.

Additionally, the section defines “eligible digital content” and specifies the exemption is available only to taxpayers primarily engaged in printing a newspaper, publishing a newspaper, publishing eligible digital content, or any combination of these activities.

Section 3 would amend RCW 82.04.260 by removing the existing tax preference for newspaper printing and publishing and the annual tax performance report requirement under RCW 82.32.534.

Section 4 would amend RCW 35.102.150 by requiring a municipal government that imposes a B&O tax to allocate the taxpayer’s gross income consistent with the new tax exemption.

Section 5 would amend RCW 82.04.460 the definition of “apportionable activities” to align with the new tax exemption.

Section 6 would amend RCW 82.08.806 to update the definition of “printer and publisher” to align with the new tax exemption.

Section 7 is the tax preference performance statement. The preference is categorized as one intended to provide tax relief for certain businesses or individuals and to create or retain jobs. The latter purpose requires a taxpayer claiming the new exemption to file a complete annual tax performance report.

The stated public policy objective is to protect and support local journalism.

The Legislature intends to extend the expiration date of the tax preference if either of two metrics are achieved:

- Compared to December 31, 2022, at least 75% of the journalism jobs, local newspapers, and community-focused online news outlets based in Washington are retained.
- If the preference enables locally based journalism outlets to continue to exist when compared to states that did not provide similar tax incentives.

Additionally, this section stipulates that RCW 82.32.808(6), which requires taxpayers to report the amount of the tax preference, does not apply to the new tax exemption.

Section 8 stipulates the act takes effect January 1, 2024.

Section 9 stipulates the act expires on January 1, 2034.

II. B - Cash receipts Impact

Cash receipts impact of the legislation on the responding agency with the cash receipts provisions identified by section number and when appropriate, the detail of the revenue sources. Description of the factual basis of the assumptions and the method by which the cash receipts impact is derived. Explanation of how workload assumptions translate into estimates. Distinguished between one time and ongoing functions.

II. C - Expenditures

Agency expenditures necessary to implement this legislation (or savings resulting from this legislation), with the provisions of the legislation that result in the expenditures (or savings) identified by section number. Description of the factual basis of the assumptions and the method by which the expenditure impact is derived. Explanation of how workload assumptions translate into cost estimates. Distinguished between one time and ongoing functions.

The fiscal note estimate assumes JLARC staff would track qualifying newspaper printers, newspaper publishers, and publishers of qualifying digital content. JLARC staff would contact and work with the Department of Revenue, and any other appropriate entities, after the legislative session to ensure relevant information to assess the effectiveness of the exemption is available. Additionally, JLARC staff may engage with other entities to monitor policies or initiatives in other states to inform the proposed interstate comparative analysis.

The expenditure detail noted reflects the costs associated with establishing contacts and collecting appropriate baseline data and information. The expenditure detail does not include the cost to conduct the analysis, which is assumed to be completed in 2031.

This tax preference review may require additional resources. The audit will be conducted and presented to JLARC consistent with the processes used for other tax preference reviews. Based on all tax preference legislation that is passed, JLARC may subsequently determine that it can absorb the costs for this proposed bill in its base budget, if the workload of other enacted tax preference legislation does not exceed current staffing. JLARC will assess all the tax preference reviews mandated in the 2023 legislative session.

This audit will require an estimated 1 audit month.

JLARC Audit Months: JLARC calculates its staff resources in "Audit Months" to estimate the time and effort to undertake and complete its studies. An "Audit Month" reflects a JLARC analyst's time for a month, together with related administrative, support, and goods/services costs. JLARC's anticipated 2023-25 costs are calculated at approximately $22,100 per audit month.

Part II: Narrative Explanation

II. A - Brief Description Of What The Measure Does That Has Fiscal Impact

Significant provisions of the bill and any related workload or policy assumptions that have revenue or expenditure impact on the responding agency by section number.

Note: This fiscal note reflects language in E2SSB 5199 as passed in the 2023 Legislative Session.

CURRENT LAW:

Businesses printing newspapers, publishing newspapers, or both, qualify for a preferential business and occupation (B&O) tax rate of 0.35%. This preferential rate expires July 1, 2024, after which a tax rate of 0.484% applies.

"Newspaper" means:

- A publication issued regularly at stated intervals at least twice a month and printed on newsprint in tabloid or broadsheet format folded loosely together without stapling, glue, or any other binding of any kind, including any supplement of a printed newspaper; and
- An electronic version of a printed newspaper that:
  - Shares content with the printed newspaper; and
  - Is prominently identified by the same name as the printed newspaper or otherwise conspicuously indicates that it is a complement to the printed newspaper.

Digital periodicals and magazines that do not have a substantially similar tangible counterpart report income from the selling activities under the retailing or wholesaling B&O tax classification and advertising income under the service and other activities B&O tax classification.

Digital periodicals and magazines that do have a substantially similar tangible counterpart report their income under the printing and publishing B&O tax classification.

PROPOSAL:

This bill creates a B&O tax exemption for amounts received from any of the following activities:

- Printing and/or publishing newspapers.
- Publishing "eligible digital content" by a person who reported under the printing and publishing tax classification for the reporting period that covers January 1, 2008, for engaging in printing and/or publishing a newspaper, as defined on January 1, 2008.

The exemption must be reduced by an amount equal to the value of any political expenditure made by the taxpayer during the tax reporting period.

If a person who is primarily engaged in printing a newspaper, publishing a newspaper, or publishing eligible digital content, or any combination of these activities, charges a single, non-variable amount to advertise in, subscribe to, or access content in both the qualifying publication and another type of publication, the entire amount is exempt.

"Eligible digital content" is a publication:

- Published at regularly stated intervals of at least once a month.
- Featuring written content, the largest category of which, as determined by word count, contains material that identifies the author or the original source of the material.
- Made available to readers exclusively in an electronic format.

The exemption applies only to businesses primarily engaged in printing a newspaper, publishing a newspaper, or publishing eligible digital content, or any combination of these activities. However, the exemption does not apply if these activities were previously engaged in by an affiliated person and were not the affiliated person's primary business activity.

This act and the exemption expire January 1, 2034.

EFFECTIVE DATE:

This bill takes effect on January 1, 2024.
